

My name is Carmen Ruebusch. I really like to travel. I have been to many places already and I plan to continue traveling. In this picture, I am in Monterey, California. I took that trip last weekend. It was really nice to get away from the cold weather here in Reno.

I am in college for marketing. I plan on becoming part of a marketing team behind a retail company. I have always been interested in fashion as well as how people choose what becomes mainstream in the fashion world. This created a large interest in consumer behaviors as well as sales tactics.

I took your information systems 101 class a year ago. However, this is the main extent of my technical background. I can do a small amount of photo editing as well, but nothing that would be on par with a professional. Other than this, I am just like anyone else in my age range who grew up online. I am proficient with a cell phone, but not with the systems that it takes to run one. The farthest I have ever gone is replacing my own iPhone screen without help.

I am looking forward to the business website project along with the rest of what this class has to offer.
